When you consider your own household expenses and needs, what are the items that usually eat up a big chunk of your regular income? If we were to take a poll, it is almost certain that we would get similar results with responses such as utilities, food, medication and other health concerns, car payments, gas for the car(s), and mortgage or rent payments. We can all agree that a huge portion of our income goes to pay for those bills. But, then there are other things such as children's education and extracurricular activities, vacation expenses, personal hobbies or interests.

Some of those expenses can be considered "necessary evils" in the sense that we may not enjoy paying for things like the mortgage and utility bills but we know we have to in order to keep a roof over our heads. The other expenses are things that we might gladly make an investment of our financial resources because they contribute to the betterment of our lives or the lives of the ones we love. Of course, the best and ideal scenario is one where we are able to balance our income and expenses so that we are able to give equal or even greater focus on those things that we can clearly see as an investment in our own personal luxuries or desires and those of the ones we love.

Yet, we must also admit that all too often our income does not allow us to focus too much on those luxuries. In the scheme of things, when it comes to choosing whether to pay the utility bill or take a vacation, the utility bill wins out. When it comes to choosing whether to pay the mortgage or invest in further education for ourselves, it will most likely be the case that we choose to keep the roof over our heads before we allow ourselves to go back to school to advance in our careers. When it comes to choosing whether to buy food for our families or invest in a hobby, the physical welfare of our family usually outweighs personal interests. Again, we strive to achieve that balance where our incomes allow us to pay the bills and focus on those things that will make us and our families into better human beings.

I mention all of this because it is not all that different when running a parish. Parishes, like any household, need to pay certain bills that are necessary: utility (heating, cooling, electricity), food to feed the priests in the rectory, expenses related to the upkeep of the buildings and parish property. All of those things are necessary but what happens to a parish when the majority or all of its income gets focused on "paying the bills"? Something gets lost just as much as something gets lost. Just as a family cannot concentrate on being a family in the best sense of what it means when the heads of the family are simply worried or overburdened with "paying the bills," a parish cannot fulfill its mission if its resources are primarily directed toward "maintenance" rather than "mission."

On this Pentecost Weekend, we are being called back to mission. Our guest presider/homilist/Mission Speaker, Father Jeff Grob, comes to us to rekindle the fire of the Holy Spirit in each of us. How strongly we are "on fire" will greatly determine whether we—as a parish community and as individuals—are focused either on "maintenance" or "mission." In other words, are our efforts simply meant to keeping things as they are? Or are we a faith community centered on "mission" where all that we are doing as a faith community (liturgy, religious education, social gatherings) are aimed at evangelizing and forming ourselves and others into disciples of Jesus?

The purpose of this week's Parish Mission is tied to the goal of the Renew My Church journey. That is, we are calling ourselves to be united with the call of Pope Francis who dreams of a "missionary option." In other words, the Holy Father is dreaming of a Church where every member has that missionary impulse to change and transform everything by infusing every word, action, and custom with the message of Jesus' Gospel.

As we enter into the Parish Mission this week and as we continue on our Renew My Church journey together with St. Henry, St. Timothy, and Blessed Andrew Stepanic Mission, let us direct our efforts more on the mission. Let us do what is necessary so that we do not have to worry so much about maintenance of buildings to the point where we lose our identity as a faith community called to change the lives and hearts of people much more than anything else. Do not get me wrong on this. We will still need buildings as valuable assets and resources. But, we need to make sure that all we are doing is aimed at bringing ourselves and others closer to God and making disciples of all nations.

CYCLES OF FAITH

Pentecost Sunday

"God is always more." Have you ever heard that? If we truly believe that He is infinite, then this statement is worth exploring. Today, we celebrate the coming of the Holy Spirit in power upon the early Church. But Pentecost wasn't the first time the disciples received the Holy Spirit. The Gospel actually occurs chronologically before Pentecost. Soon after the Resurrection, Jesus already "came and stood in their [the disciples'] midst... he breathed on them and said to them, 'Receive the Holy Spirit.'"

God is always more. Sometimes we might think the grace of God as one and done. God might break through in people's lives, but it's a one-time event on a retreat or preceding a dramatic conversion of life. But there's always more to come. Even today's Gospel isn't the first time the breath of God stirred. In Genesis, it's God's breath that stirs life into Adam in the garden. Jesus breathes on the Apostles, giving them the Holy Spirit in the quiet and silence. Later, that breath will stir into a "driving wind", and the Spirit will descend with flame...not unlike Moses on Mount Sinai.

God is always more. He has spoken throughout salvation history, and continues to speak into our lives through His Church and through the Holy Spirit alive in our hearts. This Pentecost Sunday, let us come before Him with expectant hearts! Like the disciples in the Gospel and first reading, let us await what "more" God will do.
